Josh Solloway, COO of Soil-Away, Participates in SNHU Business Leadership Panel

Hooksett, NH – As an alumnus of Southern New Hampshire University himself, Josh Solloway continues to have strong ties to the University and the local business community. Josh recently participated in a Business Leadership Panel presented by SNHU.

The panel was presented for 75 upcoming graduate students. Josh shared his own experiences as the COO of Soil-Away, with a focus on educating these students about what companies are looking for in future employees.

Josh commented on what his participation in this program meant to him, “I am excited for this opportunity to share my own insight and experience with this next generation of business leaders. I was honored to not only be asked to participate, but to do so with my own alma mater.”

The panel, which took place at SNHU’s Manchester campus, was a success with Josh and other successful professionals in the area sharing their own words of advice.

This event was another way that Josh and the entire team at Soil-Away continue to strive to make a difference in the local community and the future of tomorrow’s leaders.
